FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

PROM DRESS PROVIDERS FOR GIRLS IN NEED.

New organization in the greater Atlanta, GA area formed to donate dresses, shoes and accessories to high school girls in need.

Today's economic times have hit everyone hard. There are many homeless and poverty stricken children enrolled in the Atlanta public schools and surrounding areas. This organization wanted a way to reach out to their communities to give a sense of trust and to give service. For them, it is not just about giving a girl a dress. They are striving to give these girls a strong sense of self-worth on this journey to womanhood.

Tamyra Manns is the CEO of Dress of my Dreams, an non-profit organization whose mission is to provide dresses, shoes and accessories to high school girls in need for the prom season. Tamyra is a native of East St. Louis, Illinois, and the eldest daughter of the Reverend Tamara Rice. Growing up with two sisters in a single parent family, she experienced firsthand the challenges and expenses that go into prom season. Tamyra's experiences in the Air Force and as daughter of a pastor instilled in her a sense of duty and service to others. From those life lessons, Dress of my Dreams was born.

Please help us in our mission by becoming a sponsor.
